

Human Services Commission Community Needs Assessment Workshops

About the Public Workshops

The Human Services Commission is seeking public and local social service agency input. In order to better understand current community needs, the challenges service providers face, and to identify emerging human service needs, trends, and collaboration opportunities, the Human Services Commission wants to hear from you at two Community Needs Assessment Workshops.

What Will be Covered:

- Housing/Homelessness, Seniors, Health, Youth, and Employment
- What services are needed the most in the designated area?
- What are the current challenges to receiving services?
- How might the commission prioritize future grant funds for designated service gaps?
- Are there other local service gaps the Commission and the City should consider in addition to the currently scheduled workshops?

Desired Results:

- Offer the public and agencies an opportunity to communicate current human service needs:
- Gain a better understanding of local service gaps and challenges
- Identify opportunities for agencies to collaborate
- Consider Commission priorities for available funding
